A kiss leads to murder in 'Labyrinths of Passion'

Credibility. Defense lawyers asked whether a murder witness who is in the U.S. illegally could be trusted.

Prosecutors say that Israel Baca-Hernandez, 31, was fatally stabbed around 3 a.m. on May 4 at a Kensington restaurant known as Laberintos de Pasion for kissing a woman who was with a rival group of men.

Visit Metro.us to read more details on this case.

"He took some affront over the deceased kissing a girl that was in his party," prosecutor Carlos Vega said of suspect Luis Mendoza, 35, who allegedly wielded the knife during the fight.

But at a preliminary hearing Tuesday, defense attorneys questioned the credibility of the man who appeared as a witness because he is an undocumented immigrant.

Quoted

"When the police came and asked who did this ... everybody saw it but nobody talked. And I spoke up."

The witness, via a court interpreter

"We can't explore whether he's just a flat-out liar and a fraud?" asked defense attorney Guy Sciolla, who represents Darlin Mendoza, 31, and Ramon Turcios, 25, also charged with murder for participating in the fight.

The witness said he has a Mexican driver's license and a taxpayer ID number to pay income tax, but is not a documented immigrant.

The Mendozas and Turcios were held for court on murder charges, but defense attorneys pledged to bring the issue up at trial.

"You're representing yourself as a certain kind of person," said attorney Anthony Narcisi, who represents Luis Mendoza and claims that Baca-Hernandez provoked the fight. "You lie to the government, what happens to you? ... The question is, how far does that go?"

The defendants return to court July 15.

Defrocked Pa. Methodist pastor reinstated

Methodist Lebanon, Pa. pastor Rev. Frank Schaefer, who was defrocked after officiating at his son's same-sex wedding ceremony, will be reinstated, said a church appeals panel that withdrew his punishment on Tuesday.

An appeals panel of the United Methodist Church said it had reversed its decision to remove Schaefer from the pulpit of the Zion United Methodist Church.

Schaefer's lawyer said the pastor would not return to the congregation. REUTERS

Suspected Rittenhouse rapist in custody

The Philadelphia Police Department Special Victims Unit has arrested the man believed to have raped a 26-year-old woman twice inside her apartment in the Rittenhouse neighborhood over the weekend.

Milton Garcia, 28, was arrested overnight Tuesday at his workplace, Tashan restaurant on South Broad and Fitzwater streets, and is in police custody.

Officers executed a search warrant at Garcia's home at Eighth and Moore streets in South Philadelphia after tracking the victim's stolen iPhone to near that location. SAM NEWHOUSE

Record. Skyscraper Tetris beat out Pong

Drexel University professor Frank Lee broke his own record in the Guinness Book of World Records.

Lee's game of Tetris, which was played on the facade of Cira Centre in April and kicked off Philly Tech Week, officially set the Guinness World Record for the "Largest Architectural Video Game Display."

The game, which was played on the north and south sides of Brandywine Realty Trust's skyscraper, beat the previous record in 2013 when Lee first adapted Pong for Philly Tech Week to the 29-story University City skyscraper. METRO

On the move. Dietz & Watson moves new facility to Tacony

A Philadelphia-based deli-meats company is bringing more of its infrastructure closer to its Northeast Philadelphia headquarters.

Dietz & Watson revealed plans Tuesday to build a new trucking and distribution center along the Delaware River at the old Frankford Arsenal in Tacony. The property is adjacent to the company's headquarters and meat plant on Tacony Street.

"This has been a piece of property that we have been interested in for many years, but it hadn't been available previously," said Steven Aaron, company spokesman. "And after the fire we became aware that the property may be available."

The $50 million facility, which will stretch out over 200,000 square feet, will replace the Delanco, New Jersey, warehouse destroyed in a fire in 2013.

Aaron said the company will add 48 new jobs in manufacturing, sales and administrative. More than 100 logistics jobs will be carried over from the N.J. facility. There are about 700 employees at headquarters. TOMMY ROWAN

"We are very excited that Dietz & Watson has chosen to expand and reinvest in Philadelphia. Today's announcement is just the latest in a string of great wins for Philadelphia as we help companies to start, stay and grow in our city." Nutter

Port Richmond

Nun punched, carjacked

On the Lord's Day in Port Richmond around 11 a.m., a man slid into a running, silver 2009 Chevrolet Malibu in the Shop Rite parking lot on Aramingo Avenue and locked eyes with a nun in full habit.

He said, "Tell me where you wanna go."

Police spokeswoman Tanya Little said Tuesday that the 65-year-old nun, who was seated on the passenger side, reached for the ignition to snag the keys when the man grabbed her hand, twisted it and then repeatedly punched her in the face and threatened her. TOMMY ROWAN

'Road rage' driver pulls gun on cops, gets shot

George Batty, 47, allegedly drew a gun on two plainclothes police Monday because he was upset with their driving.

Batty pulled up beside the officers with a gun out. They ID'd themselves as police, then shot Batty in the head non-fatally. Batty then drove on, exited the car and was hit by his own still-moving car, Stanford said.

The suspect is in custody, but his name and photo were not released as of press time.

AG claims more Sandusky vics

Attorney General Kathleen Kane stated this week that the delay between one victim coming forward about former Penn State assistant coach Jerry Sandusky in 2008 and his arrest in 2011 allowed Sandusky to continue molesting two boys into 2009.

But officials who worked the case questioned the allegation. Kane took office after the investigation. METRO

Bad mother. Officer charged with urging children to fight

Tamika Gross, 35, a Philadelphia cop for seven years, was suspended with intent to dismiss on Tuesday after surrendering to Internal Affairs.

She is charged with endangering the welfare of a child, corruption of minors, simple assault and recklessly endangering another person.

Prosecutors say that on multiple occasions between January 2012 and October 2013, Gross "accompanied, encouraged, and participated in altercations between her children and other minors."

The incidents occurred in Northeast Philadelphia. In one, Gross' daughter attacked two sisters.

"According to the victims, Gross kept screaming during the fight that she was an off-duty police officer and that no one would get arrested," a District Attorney statement said.

US sends more agents to border

Homeland Security Secretary Jeh Johnson said Tuesday the United States is sending more agents to the border with Mexico to help deal with a flood of undocumented children, mostly from Central America, crossing into the United States.

One hundred and fifteen agents have been sent from less active areas to the Rio Grande Valley, and 150 more may join them, based on a review of operations there last week, Johnson said in testimony prepared for a congressional hearing on Tuesday. REUTERS

Report: Climate change will cost US hundreds of billions

There is a 5 percent chance that by 2100, losses will reach $700 billion, with average annual losses from rising oceans of $42 billion to $108 billion along the Eastern Seaboard and Gulf of Mexico. / GETTY IMAGES

Bi-partisan report. The analysis paints a grim picture of economic loss.

Annual property losses from hurricanes and other coastal storms of $35 billion; a decline in crop yields of 14 percent, costing farmers tens of billions of dollars; heat wave-driven demand for electricity costing utility customers up to $12 billion per year.

These are among the economic costs that climate change is expected to exact in the United States over the next 25 years, according to a bipartisan report. And that's just for starters: The price tag could soar to hundreds of billions by 2100.

Commissioned by a group chaired by Michael Bloomberg, former Secretary of the Treasury Henry Paulson, and environmentalist and financier Tom Steyer, the analysis "is the most detailed ever of the potential economic effects of climate change on the U.S.," said climatologist Michael Oppenheimer of Princeton University. REUTERS

Steps taken

The report lands three weeks after President Barack Obama ordered regulators to take steps to reduce greenhouse gas emissions, including requiring power plants to cut carbon dioxide emissions to 30 percent below 2005 levels by 2030.

Brooks cleared in phone hacking, bribing case

Rebekah Brooks, the former boss of Rupert Murdoch's British newspaper arm the News of the World, was acquitted on Tuesday of orchestrating a campaign to hack into phones and bribe officials in a case that has shaken the British political establishment.

Stand with Baghdad. Kerry urges Kurds to save Iraq from collapse

U.S. Secretary of State John Kerry urged leaders of Iraq's autonomous Kurdish region on Tuesday to stand with Baghdad in the face of a Sunni insurgent onslaught that threatens to dismember the country.

More than 1,000 people, mainly civilians, have been killed in less than three weeks, the United Nations said on Tuesday, calling the figure "very much a minimum."

The figure includes unarmed government troops machine-gunned in mass graves by insurgents, as well as several reported incidents of prisoners killed in their cells by retreating government forces.

Putin renounces right to send troops to Ukraine: Kremlin

Moscow. The Federation Council is due to discuss the reversal and expected to approve it.

President Vladimir Putin asked Russia's upper house on Tuesday to revoke the right it had granted him to order a military intervention in Ukraine in defense of Russian-speakers there.

Minutes before he spoke, Kiev said pro-Russian rebels in east Ukraine had shot down a military helicopter, most likely killing all nine on board. It was the most serious breach of a temporary cease-fire agreed in talks between government and rebels less than 24 hours earlier.

Putin's move received a cautious welcome in the West as a sign Moscow was ready to help engineer a settlement in Ukraine's largely Russian-speaking east.

Ukrainian President Petro Poroshenko called it a "first practical step" following Putin's statement of support last weekend for Poroshenko's peace plan for eastern Ukraine.

But later he told security chiefs to "open fire without hesitation" if government forces came under attack, and "did not rule out bringing the cease-fire regime to an early end" if rebels continued to breach it, his press service said.

Putin himself said he now expected Ukraine to begin talks on guaranteeing the rights of its Russian-speaking minority, which Russia would continue to defend. REUTERS

"It is not enough to announce a cease-fire. ... A substantive discussion of the essence of the problems is essential."

OMG! Smelling is believing: New app lets you smell text messages

Just imagine a day when you could wake up and smell the coffee without the hassle of making it. That day could be closer than you think with the advent of the "oPhone," currently in the funding stage on Indiegogo. The technology, developed by Harvard University professor David Edwards, uses an iPhone app called oSnap (available to download now). The app with an Instagram-style camera captures the image, which is then tagged with a corresponding smell and received through the oPhone. Edwards and his team sent the first champagne and passion fruit macaroon-scented message from Paris to New York earlier this month. The expert explains to Metro why he thinks a new era of messaging, entertainment and marketing is on the horizon.

Isn't communicating through smell a gimmick?

We ... communicate intensely through smells. We wouldn't be here today if we didn't have the ability to sense the world around us. That's one of the reasons that we launched the oPhone in the Museum of Natural History in New York.

Is this the modern day equivalent of spraying perfume on a letter?

Yeah, there are lots of examples of where we use aromas to communicate. Letters are a very personal and emotional kind of tagging. But we see a platform for longer form aroma compositions that accompany books and songs that are very much a part of life. So I could be eating a meal and have a long olfactory composition that accompanies that meal.

CURRENTLY, THE APP CONTAINS 32 DIFFERENT SMELLS, WITH THE POTENTIAL TO COMBINE UP TO EIGHT AT ANY ONE TIME GIVING A TOTAL OF 300,000 DIFFERENT AROMAS.
AMNH, D. FINNIN

Are we going to see aromas used in entertainment?

Yes, aromas are going to be important [for] product placement in the future.

Dog found after missing for two years in forest

A Golden Retriever that got separated from its owners during a camping trip in California's Tahoe National Forest was reunited with its family and doing well after apparently surviving on its own for nearly two years in the wilderness, the family said.

Erin and Nathan Braun were on a camping trip in October 2012 when the dog, named Murphy, went missing, according to the Los Angeles Times. Twenty months later, a camper at the French Meadows Reservoir, not more than five miles from where the Brauns lost Murphy, spotted the pet and alerted the family, according to a Facebook post written by the couple. The heat is on. Google's Nest opens doors to third-party apps

Nest, the Google Inc.-owned maker of smart thermostats and other home automation products, will allow other companies to create apps that communicate with its devices.

The program marks the first time Nest has allowed third-party companies to access its gadgets, potentially opening the door to the rich selection of apps and services that have made smartphones popular.

More than 5,000 developers have already expressed interest in developing apps for Nest products, according to the company.

Nest said that it was working with companies including washer-dryer maker Whirlpool Corp. and automatic garage door opener company Chamberlain. Closing a garage door, for instance, can alert the Nest Thermostat that the user is away from home and to turn off the heat. LED light bulbs from Lifx can be set to flash red if a Nest smoke detector senses smoke in the house.

Google acquired Nest for $3.2 billion in January, underscoring the Web search company's efforts to extend its reach into a broad field of Internet-connected devices. REUTERS

Shortage of 'spitter' apples threatens hard cider success

Bittersweet problem. Cider makers a victim of their own success.

Trying to find a traditional hard cider apple in the United States these days is the pits.

Even as hard cider is enjoying phenomenal growth, U.S. craft brewers are facing a shortage of bittersweet, bittersharp and sharp apples, the fruits traditionally used to make hard ciders.

"They're just not out there," said Colleen Finnegan, owner of Finnegan Cider in Lake Oswego, Oregon. The industry is partly a victim of its own success. For five years, hard ciders have enjoyed explosive growth.

CREATIVE COMMONS

One reason for the apple shortage is historical. During Prohibition in the 1920s, trees known to bear hard cider apples became targets of axe-wielding FBI agents.

Greg Peck, assistant professor of horticulture at Virginia Tech University, said there are no figures for how many so-called spitters — apples too tart or bitter to eat fresh but perfect for cider making — are available currently. REUTERS

By the numbers

The hard cider industry has enjoyed a sales increase of 68 percent in 2012-2013 alone, according to the Beer Institute.

25

Planting new orchards is a big commitment. An apple tree is a 25- to 30-year investment and it takes anywhere from three to six years before it becomes productive.

'Spitter' varieties

Popular bittersharp varieties include Kingston Black, Foxwhelp and Golden Russet. These are not dessert or eating apples, such as Granny Smith.

Remembering Jackson

Michael Jackson died five years ago today. As we think back upon the legacy of the King of Pop (music = awesome; personal life = off the wall), let's remember him from a photo taken 30 years ago, rather than the last images of his life. This pic was snapped in July of 1984 in a hotel room during the 1984 Democratic National Convention. Jesse Jackson (no relation, BTW) was a hopeful for the Democratic presidential nomination, though he lost to Walter Mondale, who then lost the presidency to Ronald Reagan, who died 10 years ago this month. Is there a conspiracy theory to be made of all these connections? Probably not, but just check out how cool MJ looked before we knew how weird he was.

Kristen Bell is preggers

Kristen Bell is pregnant once again. The "Frozen" star's rep confirms that Bell and husband Dax Shepard are expecting their second child. "The whole family is beyond excited," the rep tells People magazine. Bell and Shepard are already parents to 1-year-old daughter Lincoln Bell. They were married in 2013. She's pictured here attending a SoulCycle event this past weekend, but wasn't showing any sign of a baby bump yet. Or maybe it's just because black is truly slimming?!

Miley's little sister has a summer job

Well, it's certainly a different summer employment experience than working the fries at Burger King. Miley Cyrus has a job for her 14-year-old sister, Noah Cyrus, right, that some critics might find a tad inappropriate for the young teen. Miley tells Australia's 2Day FM radio station that Noah works as her "p—y police" to prevent the singer's privates from becoming exposed during her vigorous dance routines in skimpy costumes. "She makes sure that, you know, everything is staying intact," Miley explains.

Don't do a selfie with Leo

A note to fans of Leonardo DiCaprio: The "Wolf of Wall Street" star is happy to acknowledge you, should you meet each other, but he doesn't necessarily want there to be a record of the occasion. According to the New York Post, DiCaprio was partying with A Tribe Called Quest rapper Q-Tip in NYC's Meatpacking District recently when a blonde fan celebrating her birthday "fell into their area" and introduced herself. DiCaprio "said, 'Happy birthday' to the girl," according to a source, but when she asked to have her picture taken with him, "he responded, 'Sorry, not tonight.'"

Catch up with the slow-burning first season of "Rectify" on Netflix. New episodes air Thursdays at 9 p.m. on Sundance. / GETTY IMAGES

Quoted

"It's a hard show to define because it fits outside of the boundaries of so much of what we're used to, structurally, on television." Young, on "Rectify"

Interview. Aden Young of "Rectify" discusses playing TV's least talkative main character.

Aden Young and Abigail Spencer star in "Rectify."
JAMES MINCHIN, SUNDANCETV

You might not be alone if you haven't watched the first season of "Rectify." The drama aired only six episodes in 2013, and it's on a premium cable channel. But positive word of mouth is spreading about the show, which just began its second season on the Sundance channel.

"Rectify" revolves around a single event. The main character, Daniel Holden, was convicted of a brutal rape and murder as a teenager. Some 20 years later, he's released from prison on a technicality. But without an exoneration, no one quite knows how to interact with him. How can he adjust to life after 20 years on death row? Did he really commit the crime? The show is notable for its steadfast refusal to pass judgment on these and other questions, as well as for its patience. It's all held together by the intense performance at the heart of the show.

Aden Young inhabits Daniel with a stillness almost unique on television. Long moments on the show pass while Daniel observes something silently. One early scene saw him pulling a pillow apart only to joyfully watch the feathers float down on him like snow. If this description makes the show seem dull, it isn't. It's measured and gorgeous, but not boring.

"It's a hard show to define because it fits outside of the boundaries of so much of what we're used to, structurally, on television," says Young. He's not exaggerating. Those first six episodes take place across Daniel's first six days out of prison.

Young thinks the premise itself has allowed for more interesting storytelling. He describes Daniel as a man coming back to life, which explains why Daniel is slow to react to the world around him. It's a difficult performance to calibrate, and Young jokes that "a great deal of Valium" is needed to slow himself to the pace at which Daniel experiences the world.

That said, he calls Daniel a "gift for an actor" because of how much he listens. "If you do that, you find that those spaces where very little is happening are really filled up with a great deal of introspection and thought."

If Daniel seemed a bit passive in the first season, look for that to change. In the second season, he'll be a little more proactive about exploring his new freedom.

"It's much more about him wanting to experience life, almost in the way an adolescent might — to feel it, and taste it and rush off with a new discovery, very unaware of the consequences those actions will have," says Young.

Jenny Slate. The 'Obvious Child' star talks youth and why the film isn't an 'abortion comedy'

Jenny Slate — "Saturday Night Live" alum and the woman behind "Marcel the Shell" — takes the lead in "Obvious Child," an indie comedy in which she plays a late-20s New York City native who is dealing with what could be her worst Valentine's Day yet. The events of the day include an appointment to get an abortion, an aspect of the film that's been stealing most of the focus.

Jenny Slate plays a floundering comic in "Obvious Child," now in theaters. / GETTY IMAGES

'Obvious Child' manages to capture an authentic look at a stage of life that we don't see closely examined often in film.
I know, it's strange. People seem to think of the late 20s as, like, [years when people] are go-getters and people who are too young to say, like, "Get your life together." But, in fact, I think the late 20s are really, really tough. They were really tough for me. I would never go back.

Really?
Sort of. Nobody told me that my 20s would be a surprise second adolescence, you know? And also, you're getting to the point where you're like, "I should have a career formed now, right?" And it just takes longer than that. There's also an incorrect assertion that personal development should be finished by that point, and that's untrue.

It feels weird to think how much people in past generations were expected to have figured out by age 25.
Yeah, like what the f—? In eight years, starting at 22 to 30, I'm going to have to get all that s— together — and half of it I don't even want. No! I'm sure if you're in a field that has more structure, maybe you are more settled by that point. But freak-outs are allowed and normal. NED EHRBAR

On the issues

The A-word

Are you getting tired of people referring to this as 'the abortion movie'?
Yeah, because it isn't a comedy about abortion. It's a romantic comedy with a modern story in which a woman has a safe and regret-free procedure.

That's rare, considering how abortion is usually dealt with in film and on TV.
It's important, I think, to examine and express the idea that even though a choice is made and a choice is clear, that it's really complex even after the choice is made. Those more nuanced situations are what makes a story relatable and interesting.

But you're right, it's not what this movie is 'about.'
Yeah. But I get it. And honestly I would much rather people talk about it than not talk about it, and if people are going to say, "It's the THIS," the only thing that will happen is people will show up and realize that it's many things and not just one.

Encouraging Study on TYPE II DIABETES Shows the disease CAN BE REVERSED in as little as 1 WEEK!

A free guide has just been made available to Type II Diabetics detailing an approach that appears to be more powerful than any drug know to modern science. The free diabetic guide explains in plain English how many diabetics have been able to reduce and eliminate their drugs and insulin injections, lose weight without exercise, reduce and eliminate the risk for diabetic complications, restore pancreatic function, and even become non-diabetic. The free guide also reveals rarely used diagnostic testing that is helping doctors understand potential causes of diabetes beyond weight gain, genetics and lack of exercise.

A little patience

New 'Familiars.'
Antlers singer Peter Silberman explains how slowing down tempos helps him to be present in the moment.

The Antlers have created a world in which a cheerful mariachi horn is right at home with classic soul chord progressions and the heady dystopian plodding of Pink Floyd.

"I've been listening to Pink Floyd for so long that I'm sure it's in there in a permanent way," says singer and guitarist Peter Silberman.

On "Familiars," the band's third album as a multi-member concern, the thing that unifies the sonic elements is patience.

"That has become my way of attempting to be present in songwriting," says Silberman of the careful pace that defines the album. "Part of the reason that I tend to lean toward slower tempos is to negate the rush to the finish line."

Silberman says the other band members exercise patience when they're playing but also when the singer revises lyrics right up to the deadline.

"Through the last days of recording, I was still changing words," he says.

Although he keeps himself at a slower tempo when recording, he speeds up when he speaks about it, still obviously excited to discuss the music.

"I wanted it to be the truest album, but I think reaching some sort of state of ultimate truth is kind of impossible, and I learned that over the course of this," he says. "There is no such thing as perfection."

Antlers lyrical tip

Checking yourself

Silberman says that although he's always tweaking his lyrics, he usually doesn't discuss them with the band. But when he tosses out a phrase such as "the way that regrets can imprison you" about one of their songs, it's clear he's having these conversations with somebody.

They're mostly with himself though, he says: "In order to figure out what that line is, I often have to write it out in plain speech, and less poetically, and say, 'OK, what the f— is the point that I'm trying to make here?'"

He could have been merely having a leisurely stroll on a breezy Sunday morning, but what was "Top Chef" Kevin Sbraga really doing hanging in front of the recently closed Mildred on S. Eighth St. in the Italian Market? Rumor has had Sbraga looking for a space in South Philly since the beginning of the year, and he seemed pretty serious about being there. Maybe that's where he'll add to his formidable list of restaurants, which includes the Fat Ham in University City, Sbraga on Broad Street and — also on Broad — the under-construction eatery at developer Carl Dranoff's new SouthStar Lofts.

The boutique hotel with the rooftop swimming pool we recently featured in Boldface has an address (1525 Chestnut) with history (the old A. Pomerantz Building) and a Phillies connection, as one-time center fielder Garry Maddox owned the mini-skyscraper. While no dates have been given regarding that bo-tel's opening, another massive undertaking a couple blocks away, the $50-million redevelopment of the historically registered 1616 Walnut building — branded now as ICON — opened with 206 luxury apartments and 23,000 square feet of retail space for current renters like Theory and Santander Bank. Almost half of the residential units are rented already.

Stitching up Fabric Row

Improvement. The community is being made over, with bike racks, benches and lighting that makes more sense in a neighborhood.

JULIA WEST
@MetroPhilly
letters@metro.us

Quoted

"I wanted to develop a streetscape plan that would be an improvement but implementable — I'm not looking to tear up the sidewalk."

Michael Harris, executive director of South Street Headhouse District

Fabric Row, the section of Fourth Street from South to Catherine, has always been known for its shops, from decades-old, by-the-bolt fabric stores to newer, trendier boutiques.

But more recently, it's been synonymous with the fires last year that displaced dozens and took the life of Fire Captain Michael Goodwin.

See more at www.metro.us

Michael Harris, executive director of South Street Headhouse District (SSHD), is stepping in to help spruce up the area with some big — but not too big — community projects.

"I was struck by the investment being done by store owners on the interior, but the exterior was lacking," says Harris — the individual shops are well cared for, but the street as a whole needs a boost.

"I wanted to develop a streetscape plan that would be an improvement but implementable — I'm not looking to tear up the sidewalk," Harris explains.

He met with residents and business owners to learn what people want to see happen in their neighborhood. Pedestrian lighting was a recurring request.

"The light poles on Fourth Street are not pedestrian lights, such as the ones you would see on South or Walnut," says Elena Brennan, owner of Bus Stop Boutique, which opened seven years ago on Fourth. "The lights are [like the ones] more typically seen on larger streets and highways, so they are too tall to project enough light down onto the street."

Harris notes that while the lighting may take longer to deliver, other street amenities, such as bike racks and benches, may be in place this summer. The next steps, according to Harris, involve more talks with the city, the Streets Department and Councilman Mark Squilla, who represents the district.

Harris, who's been at SSHD for two years, says this improvement project is a top priority. He laughs when asked if this project is his baby, yet doesn't deny it.

"There are several projects that we have at different stages in the pipeline," he says, "and this was one that I thought was pretty important to achieve."

PLUS

Deep pockets

On the cheap

How does a community pay for improvements? With street beautification grants and design help from the Community Design Collaborative. Architects from the organization lend their expertise to community projects.

"They were great partners," Harris says. "We put in about $1,500 and got about $44,000 worth of service from that. It's a great organization that helps those who don't have deep pockets for this kind of thing."

Pieces to update your summer wardrobe

With this year's glacial winter far behind, and months of summer ahead, it's time to celebrate. And what better way to do that than with a seasonal shopping spree? Refresh your wardrobe with these timeless and trendsetting pieces. ZAHRA AHMED

Classic

A crisp white button-up is a staple that will never let you down. Keep it casual by pairing it with jeans or dress it up with a skirt. You can't go wrong when you own a top that works with any outfit.

$20, UNIQLO

To cap it off

What's summer without a good hat that gives you a little shade everywhere you go? A straw fedora is the perfect accessory to complete any summer look.

A STRAW HAT COMPLETES MIRANDA KERR'S CASUAL-CHIC LOOK.

Flashback

Hemlines range from short to long in the summer, but 1940s-era midi skirts and dresses provide the perfect middle ground. Mimic the era's grace and elegance with an A-line midi skirt that starts at the waist and cuts off around mid-calf — a silhouette that flatters every woman.

$76, TOPSHOP

KELLY OSBOURNE ROCKS A MIDI SKIRT IN THIS ENSEMBLE, REMINISCENT OF OLD HOLLYWOOD GLAMOUR.

New kid on the block

It's always nice to be able to walk comfortably and look cute at the same time. A pair of block heels lets you do that — the short, thick heel gives enough support to keep you going all day.

GAMING ALONE OR WITH OTHERS

Apple's iPad has a rich and giant touchscreen, which in addition to enabling hours of time-wasting via Tinder, makes it great for gaming. As such, developers have consistently pumped out title after title for your little constant companion. Here are a couple more.

"Broken Age" is a visual feast with puzzles that could be just a bit harder. / DOUBLE FINE GAMES

'Broken Age'

Maker: Double Fine Games
Cost: $9.99

"Broken Age" is "the" Kickstarter success story for gaming. It managed to raise $3.5 million on the crowdfunding site without breaking a sweat, due to the name recognition of lead designer Tim Schafer. Schafer is one of the patron saints of adventure gaming, having had a hand in "Monkey Island," "Grim Fandango," "Day of the Tentacle" and many other classics.

So how does "Broken Age" measure up? Did the Internet do well to invest so much in it? In a word, yes. It isn't too far removed from the adventure classics of yesteryear, in that it moves slowly and is more interested in puzzles and story than anything else. Thankfully, both of these aspects shine, although the puzzles could be a bit more difficult. The iPad's touchscreen seems to be made for this game, making it the definitive version in my eyes.

'Mucho Party'

Maker: GlobZ
Cost: $3.99

Nintendo has cornered the market on party games, but that doesn't mean that a few don't pop up on other platforms. Enter "Mucho Party," an acid-dipped mini-game collection that would feel right at home with a Wario logo stamped over it.

The two-player game is meant to be played with the iPad on a table so both players can crowd around. There are all kinds of rapid-fire challenges (30 in all) that await players. These include hitting nails through boards, tap dancing and, uh, playing Twister with your fingers.

For your health. Major tech firms are aiming to better help diabetics

For decades, medical technology firms have searched for ways to let diabetics check blood sugar easily, with scant success. Now, the world's largest mobile technology firms are getting in on the act.

Apple, Samsung and Google are searching for applications that could turn nascent wearable technology such as smartwatches and bracelets from curiosities into must-have items. With these advances, sufferers can monitor blood sugar.

The first round of technology may be limited, but eventually the companies could compete in a global blood-sugar tracking market worth over $12 billion by 2017, according to research firm GlobalData.

Diabetes afflicts 29 million Americans and costs the economy some $245 billion in 2012, a 41 percent rise in five years. Many diabetics prick their fingers as much as 10 times daily in order to check levels of glucose sugar. REUTERS

Children needed for a research study

Children between the ages of 6 and 10 years are needed for a research study that will help us better understand sleep in children.

We are looking for normal, healthy children.

The study involves one night in our sleep lab and a day visit to the hospital. During this study, nothing will hurt your child and no needles will be used. An adult must stay with the child overnight.

We offer reimbursement for expenses.

For further information, please call

Mary Anne Cornaglia at (267) 426-5748

Keeping summer fun and healthy

Supplement grilled foods with fresh fruits and veggies. / DIGITAL VISION

Obesity. Give kids smarter food options they'll still enjoy at your next cookout.

Barbecues, picnics and vacations are the stuff of summer fun. But the foods commonly found at such gatherings can mean more calories and unhealthy ingredients in a child's diet.

"There are a lot of opportunities to eat junk food during the summer," says Dr. Lonna Gordon, the adolescent medicine fellow at Icahn School of Medicine at Mount Sinai. "But things like barbecues and going for ice cream have to be seen as treats, and not something they eat every weekend or every day."

Gordon, who specializes in childhood and adolescent obesity, advises parents to plan the cookout or picnic menu well and prepare fruits and veggies ahead of time. "Prepare peaches, watermelon and fruit salad, and include vegetables like portobellos to grill alongside the meats."

This advice, Gordon points out, isn't just for overweight children. "An obese child doesn't necessarily become an obese adult, and the skinny child doesn't necessarily stay skinny. They're told that because they're skinny, they can eat what they want. That's not true."

Gordon adds that summer brings plenty of healthy upsides for kids and teens, including more time outside playing.

"Also, take children to the farmers market and to pick-your-own farms, and get them involved in healthy eating," she says.

But summer wouldn't be the same without ice cream and hotdogs. Even for already overweight or obese children, Gordon advises parents not to ban outright foods that kids' siblings and friends are enjoying.

"We don't want to stigmatize [obese] children by separating them out from their friends or by denying them," says Gordon.

"One plus is that kids have time on their side," she says. "They still have time to grow, which is why we don't put kids on diets. They need a wide variety of foods, including carbs and fats. It really is a matter of moderation."

Three tips

Gordon has some tips to help parents keep summer eating nutritious and tasty for kids:

- Cool treats: "Ice cream can't be an everyday thing," she advises. "There's a lot of sugar and a lot of fat in it. Vary it with fruit bars, sorbets and Italian ices to decrease the calories. At home, make fruit pops — put a piece of fruit on a stick and put in the freezer."
- Super salads: "Take advantage of summer produce and create healthy, tasty salads. Avoid mayonnaise and choose olive oil-based dressings as opposed to creamy. And don't use too much. Salad dressing can ruin the healthy veggies."
- Be creative: "Make it fun, especially for young kids; they tend to eat things that look fun. Use cookie cutters for veggies and fruits. Make faces on the plate. Get your child involved in the prep. They tend to eat things when they're helped with the prep."

Addiction can start at home

Opioids. Inside the medicine cabinet lurks a growing issue for teenagers.

A recent study of heroin use shows that it's on the rise among young people. But a dealer may not be where teens are getting their first fix.

"A lot of them are going over to a friend's house after school, and they're going straight to the medicine cabinet; it's like a candy store for them," says Neil Gaer, director of clinical affairs at Phoenix House New England. "That's how they become addicted, especially if they're getting opiate-based narcotics."

Marijuana is still the drug of choice for slightly more than half of the teenage patients at Gaer's chapter of Phoenix House, a national nonprofit network of substance-abuse treatment centers. But he has been seeing teens addicted to Oxycodone, Vicodin and other opiate-based drugs. From there, their next fix is a matter of economics.

"They become addicted to it but it's harder to come by, and heroin is so much cheaper on the streets," he says.

As busy as families are, opportunity is plentiful. Everyone may leave the house at the same time in the morning, but schools let out in the early afternoon while parents may not get home until 5 or 6 p.m., meaning "there's a lot of time for mischief," Gaer says. And with teens commonly moody and sullen, people who might notice warning signs often don't suspect it's addiction.

Even "good kids" might have trouble staying ahead in school and try using stimulants to help them study late. "A lot of times, kids feel that they're invincible — 'I can use this, and it isn't going to affect me' — and they don't think about the consequences to themselves or the harm they're causing others."

The average age of young patients at Gaer's facility is 16. They arrive via family members, schools or through the criminal justice system.

The residential program is a last resort, if outpatient treatment and other "wrap-around services" aren't enough.

Addiction in younger people is an issue that the medical community is confronting. Pediatricians are asking basic questions to screen teenagers for problems. And the Mental Health Parity Act, part of the Affordable Care Act, mandated insurance coverage for substance abuse.

"Now more than ever, there are so many more options for people," Gaer says.

Stats

These are the major addiction issues that young patients at Phoenix House New England face:

- 52% marijuana
- 26% alcohol
- 15% opioids/heroin
- 55% are also smokers

Marijuana and cigarettes are the most common addictive substances used by teens. / THINKSTOCK

Warning signs

What should parents be watching out for? Everyone has bad days, but Gaer says that if these problems persist for more than two days in a row, there might be a larger issue.

- Irritability
- Keeping a different schedule
- Shifting sleep patterns
- Change in appetite

Horoscope

♋ Cancer | June 21-July 22. Get at least two points of view. You could lose out on an opportunity if you are too quick to accept the first opinion that comes along.

♌ Leo | July 23-Aug. 22. You have great ideas, but you might find your estimates way off target. Before you do any spending, make a realistic outline for your budget.

♍ Virgo | Aug. 23-Sept. 22. Your ideas will not go over well with everyone. Be prepared to defend your actions and prove your methods to all opponents.

♎ Libra | Sept. 23-Oct. 22. Travel and learning experiences will go hand-in-hand today. Life-altering changes can be made if you are open to new concepts.

♏ Scorpio | Oct. 23-Nov. 21. Get serious about your financial situation. You can make the most of your future by building a solid base. Find new ways to bring in more cash.

♐ Sagittarius | Nov. 22-Dec. 21. Don't use past problems as an excuse for current difficulties. Face the facts and deal with whatever is holding you back.

♑ Capricorn | Dec. 22-Jan. 20. You will have to protect your reputation and assets. Be wary of someone who tries to take advantage of your goodwill.

♒ Aquarius | Jan. 21-Feb. 18. It's a great day to spice up your life. Spend time shopping for something that will make you feel and look good.

♓ Pisces | Feb. 19-March 20. Problems with a personal or professional partner will escalate if left to fester. Make the first move by being honest and direct about your feelings.

♈ Aries | March 21-April 20. Love should highlight your day. You will receive some compelling new information that will help you make a decision.

♉ Taurus | April 21-May 21. Don't spend a lot of money on over-the-counter enhancements. A confident air will get you further ahead than what you buy.

♊ Gemini | May 22-June 20. If you don't have a full grasp of what is going on, ask someone who does. Trying to guess your way out of it will get you nowhere. BERNICE BEDE OSOL

Kids should be off-limits to comic

Re: 'OK with the edge' (Metro, June 24) I read the interview with Whitney Cummings, and I couldn't help noticing that the article never mentioned that Cummings once called Sarah Palin's son "that retarded thing that came out of Sarah Palin's vagina." I can just imagine the uproar that would have resulted if Cummings had said something like that about a Democratic politician's child. I realize that Cummings said in the article that "Literally nothing is off-limits." However, I think that ridiculing a mentally challenged child should definitely be off-limits.

No need to tan

Re: 'Fit to be fab' (Metro, June 23) Maria Menounos has done a commendable job of maintaining a healthy weight, but it looks like she's been neglecting her skin. That deep a suntan can not only lead to skin cancer and premature aging, it also looks ghoulishly unnatural. The suntan fad came from the Industrial Revolution. It was meant to show you're a member of the leisure class who's not stuck indoors in a factory all day. Shouldn't that be out of date by now?

No. 4

Dante Exum

Two weeks ago, the 76ers taking Exum at No. 3 would have sounded crazy. The 6-foot-6 guard from Australia is the wild card here for the Sixers. Can he coexist with Michael Carter-Williams in the backcourt? It would be fascinating to watch. Exum is young and ultra-talented who could grow with MCW. Why not?

76ers could make noise or stand pat

This could be the most intriguing draft in the history of the Philadelphia 76ers.

There doesn't appear to be a franchise-changing player such as Kobe Bryant, Tim Duncan or LeBron James, but there is definitely a plethora of talent. And the Sixers sure need talent. Loads of talent. On Thursday night, the Sixers hold seven picks – Nos. 3, 10, 32, 39, 47, 52 and 54.

As the draft begins and continues through the night, it's possible those picks could change. Trades can be made and general manager Sam Hinkie has already shown he's willing to deal anyone.

Last year on draft night, Hinkie shipped All-Star point guard Jrue Holiday to the New Orleans Pelicans for Nerlens Noel. This summer, Noel is expected to make his long-awaited debut for the Sixers after recovering from a torn ACL.

With the Sixers currently holding the No. 3 pick, and contemplating moving either up or down on the draft board, nobody in the prospect pool appears to be unattainable. Here is one last look at the top names who could wind up playing in the Wells Fargo Center this fall.

ANDY JASNER
@AndyJasner
sports@metro.us

Joel Embiid

He had a back injury at Kansas. Now, it's a foot injury which will likely sideline him for four-to-six months. This is a major risk.

Embiid could wind up being an All-Star center for years to come. Or he could be the next Sam Bowie. Such a tough call.

Once the consensus No. 1 overall pick, it now seems likely he is available for the Sixers at No. 3.

Andrew Wiggins

The 6-foot-8 forward from Kansas would be a perfect fit with the Sixers.

Even though Wiggins played just one season with the Jayhawks, he proved his mettle in many ways. Wiggins has much to learn, but he could turn into a franchise player.

But with Embiid's injury shaking things up atop the draft board, it might take a trade for the Sixers to get him.

The Sixers might have to pull off a trade to snag their favorite prospect Andrew Wiggins. / ALL PHOTOS GETTY IMAGES

Jabari Parker

The former one-year wunderkind from Duke looks to be the most polished player. He can score. He can get to the basket. He can rebound.

Parker does a lot of things well. But he doesn't seem to do anything at an elite level just yet.

With his work ethic, that could change. Parker should put up numbers right away, but projecting down the line is tricky.

Parker, like Wiggins, will likely go to the Cavaliers or the Bucks, but with Hinkie calling the shots you never know. The 76ers could trade up for the swingman, an analytics expert's dream.

NBA. Sixers No. 10 pick in first round a valuable commodity

See more at www.metro.us

There are a lot of options for the Sixers on draft night, many of which involve trading up (to get Andrew Wiggins) or trading down. But if they stay put at No. 3 and No 10, they could wind up with two huge pieces to build on into the future.

Keep in mind that last season's NBA Rookie of the Year — Michael Carter-Williams — was taken in the No. 11 spot in the 2013 draft. Having two picks in the top 10 is both rare and extremely valuable.

Here are some more names to keep an eye on in Thursday's draft:

ANDY JASNER

Nik Stauskas

The guard from Michigan shot nearly 50 percent from the field, scoring 17.5 points per game. Stauskas would be a nice fit in the 76ers' offense. The sharpshooter, who once hit 46 in a row in practice, once challenged Stephen Curry to a three-point shooting contest.

Dario Saric

This would be a risk because Saric has reportedly agreed to play the next couple of years in Turkey. But he's 6-foot-10 and is a double-double machine. If the Sixers are truly committed to rebuilding, they might be willing to wait a few years and add Saric.

Doug McDermott

All he did was produce in four seasons at Creighton. McDermott is a rare talent with the ability to knock down the mid-range jumper along with the long ball. McDermott could step into the starting lineup and average 15 points or more per game in Philly.

Gary Harris

Almost every player coming from Michigan State is fundamentally sound. Harris sure is. A capable scorer and rebounder, Harris also displays a will to win, which is something you can't teach. The 19-year-old could be a nice addition to the Sixers' backcourt.

Zach LaVine

He had plenty of good moments at UCLA, but proved to be a very streaky shooter. If he can find consistency from the perimeter, the Sixers would have a strong pick at No. 10. Back in high school he was ranked the No. 1 basketball player in Washington state.

Second-rounders

Teams can still grab solid players in the second round. Assuming the Sixers keep the No. 32 pick, here are a couple of interesting players who could fall to them.

- Mitch McGary: He's 6-foot-10 and skilled in the low post. The former Michigan standout doesn't have much of an outside game, but he can score down low and he can rebound and defend.
- Shabazz Napier: He won an NCAA title with Connecticut and showed tremendous leadership and toughness. Napier was willing to take big shots. He also made those shots and led the Huskies to a title against long odds. With coaching, Napier could work his way into a rotation.

Going the trade route?

Don't discount the possibility of a big trade

The Sixers could go a variety of ways on Thursday night when the draft finally arrives.

Veteran forward Thaddeus Young could possibly be dealt. A number of other moves could be made.

There is even buzz that Rookie of the Year Michael Carter-Williams might be dealt if the Sixers plan on moving up, or on taking Dante Exum.

It's going to be a wild night.

And it could be a night which continues to shape the future of the rebuilding Sixers.

Will LeBron James hold NBA fans hostage this summer and make "The Decision Part II"? / GETTY IMAGES

James opts out, Sixers unlikely

NBA. LeBron James has become a free agent again after opting out of his Miami Heat contract.

At face value, hearing that LeBron James has left over $40 million on the table and has decided to become a free agent sounds like a pretty big deal.

Philadelphia, a city with a basketball team that was so far under the salary cap it has more than $30 million (per season) left to spend, could reasonably try and sign the two-time NBA champion. But all signs lead to James returning to the Heat. And here's why:

The Sixers, while wealthy in cap room and prospects, lack the ability to compete for a title right now. If the 76ers wanted to take a real pass at getting the four-time MVP winner, they would need to add big pieces, and fast. Sixers GM Sam Hinkie is content to work things from the bottom up, drafting well and collecting young talent.

Three other teams are mentioned as possible landing spots: Cleveland, solely due to his Ohio ties and history with the Cavaliers; the Bulls, who have the room to sign him and can compete right now; and the Rockets, who can pair James with James Harden and Dwight Howard.

EVAN MACY
@evan_macy
evan.macy@metro.us

Back to South Beach?

James has yet to sit down and meet with Chris Bosh and Dwyane Wade, who might also opt out.

- The Heat, if Bosh, Wade and James all take a pay cut, could still take a run at adding Carmelo Anthony to create a Big Four.
- Pat Riley said, in a statement, that he expected this to happen and also expects James' return.

Big or bust?

Embiid puts Sixers in a tough spot

With Kansas big man and top prospect Joel Embiid recovering from foot surgery, the 76ers, with the No. 3 overall pick, must find a way to turn lemons into lemonade.

The top two picks will almost undoubtedly be Jabari Parker and Andrew Wiggins, in some order, to the Cavaliers and Bucks.

History shows they could take the center, having done almost the exact thing in 2013 when they traded Jrue Holiday to the Pelicans for then-injured Nerlens Noel. But they already have a rookie center ready to go.

Phils ink outfielder

Phillies sign Sizemore to minor-league contract

After a lackluster two months in Boston, Grady Sizemore will have an opportunity to bounce back with the Phillies as the team announced the outfielder had been signed to a minor-league contract Tuesday.

He batted .216 with 15 RBIs in 52 games for the Red Sox and will report to Triple-A on Thursday. METRO
